PASSING EFFICIENCY is used as an overall rating of a quarterback. A quarterback must throw an average of 20 passes per game in order to be eligible. Four passing statistics are used to determine Passing Efficiency: completion percentage, average gain per pass attempted, percentage of interceptions to attempts, and percentage of touchdowns to attempts. In calculating Passing Efficiency, the numbers generated by calculating the four statistics involved are added together. Because of the addition, it is possible to have passing efficiencies over 100. Despite this we have included every quarterback from last year.
